INTRODUCTION

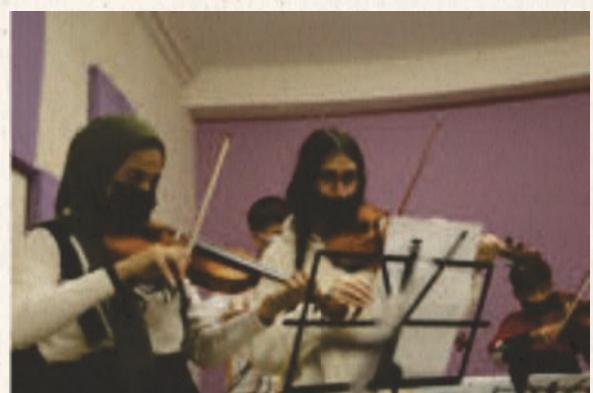

Caritas Jordan (CJ) has long-standing experience in working with refugees, migrants, and vulnerable people across the country. As a Charitable Non-Profit Organization, CJ was officially established and registered in the Ministry of Social Development in 1968.

Since its foundation, CJ has been responding to humanitarian crises that impact Jordan, such as the large influx of Palestinian refugees, the Iraqi refugees influx during the Gulf war in 1991 and 2003, the massive influx of the Syrian refugees in 2011, and the Iraqi refugees in 2014 due to IS invasion of Mosul and Nineva, in addition to other nationalities who are in Jordan as migrant workers. CJ thus takes an active role in supporting refugees, migrants, local and host communities developing emergency, relief aids, socio-economic empowerment and socio-voluntary work programs to them aiming at promoting the human integral development justice, solidarity and social cohesion.

For over 55 years, CJ has been responding to the needs of vulnerable and disadvantaged populations in Jordan, providing health, education, livelihoods, shelter, basic needs, food, WASH and social protection services. Throughout a network of 25 Centers existing in 9 governorates staffed by around 400 trained staff members who are being supported by a network of more than 3,000 trained volunteers (including refugees and migrants).

CJ takes into consideration the endorsement of inclusion for the most vulnerable groups, especially children, women elders and and People With Disabilities in humanitarian response in line with the international standards.

To interpret CJ's humanitarian work into deeds, the organization advocates the NEXUS approach overlapping with the emergency relief and development interventions ensuring that no one is left behind.
